San Francisco, Aug 14: Born in Google's shadow, Niantic strode into the spotlight with a mobile internet spin on hunting Pokemon but can the obsession with the game lead to long-term financial success?

Pokemon hunt leads to Europe's boutique firms grab M&A market

Founder and chief executive John Hanke has told a story of naming the company after a whaling ship abandoned in San Francisco Harbor by crew members who rushed off to seek fortunes during the famed Gold Rush. The ship was run aground and converted into a store.

London, Aug 14

BOUTIQUE advisory firms now receive nearly half of all mergers and acquisition fees in Europe, stealing market share and pushing dealmakers from global investment banks hamstrung by a renewed focus on cost-cutting and regulations on how much they can pay.

Founded largely by veterans fleeing bureaucracy and shrinking paychecks at the large banks, these low-profile small firms are proving popular among companies who value their niche expertise and independent advice as opposed to megabanks who tend to cross-sell other services like financing.

Advisory boutiques have captured 44% or $1.7 billion of total completed M&A deals fees in Europe, Thomson Reuters data collected up to August 10 shows.

Boutiques based in Europe captured 24.9% of $3.64 billion, and other boutiques took the other 19%, or $2.23 billion.

That compares with 42.8% for the whole of 2015, 30.5% at the height of the last M&A boom in 2007 and 20.1% in 2000, when Thomson Reuters began recording the data.

The data excludes some of the massive deals of 2015 that have not yet been completed, including Anheuser-Busch InBev's $100 billion-plus merger with SABMiller.

"We are not trying to sell multiple products. Our sole focus is on high-value-add advisory business, and as such we have no conflicts," Pieter-Jan Bouten, managing director at Greenhill, one of the early US-based boutiques to set up in Europe, told Reuters.

Boutiques are defined as firms earning greater than 85% of their fees from M&A and equity capital markets activity (ECM), with M&A accounting for at least 70% of that wallet. With the number of bou-
